Title: Early Naturalizations, Huron County, Ohio Court Records, Common Pleas Journals, 1819-1864

Author: Mary Carabin

Publisher: Huron County Chapter OGS, Norwalk, Ohio, 1992

Location: Huron County, Ohio

In Huron County, Ohio, naturalizations were recorded in the Common Pleas court journals from 1819 through 1862. In addition, some original documents survive for the period 1857 to 1862 and are extracted here. In the first part, the author provides the name of the alien, the record date, country of origin, age, city of entry, volume and page number in the journals, and the type of action – naturalization or intent. The age and port of entry are not given in most of the listings. This section consists of 30 pages. In part two, information extracted from original documents, Mrs. Carabin includes the name of the alien, the date of entry, place of origin, a notation if they were under 18 when they arrived, the date of their intent filing, the place of this filing if somewhere other than Huron County, the naturalization date, and the name of the character witness. This section is six pages in length. There is not an every name index, so users should look for their ancestor in both alphabetical sections and then scan the witnesses in part two. The journals are maintained by the Huron County Clerk of Courts, Norwalk, Ohio, and have also been microfilmed. Volunteers at the Huron Co Chapter OGS, PO Box 923, Norwalk OH 44857, can secure photocopies of the documents for a donation if the reader is unsuccessful getting them through the Clerk of Courts and/or FamilySearch.

This is one of 18 titles that were provided to the Ohio Genealogical Society for its Digital Library by the Huron County Chapter OGS through the 8 for 88 program. OGS is attempting to secure 8 new digital offerings for each of the 88 counties. Please keep in mind that works by OGS and its chapters are generally copyrighted. Naturalization Records

The United States is a nation of immigrants. The interaction between new arrivals and the local population influenced the growth of this country and is a fascinating study, whether taken from the point of view of the individual immigrant or from the larger perspective of demographics. Naturalization records provide vital data for such a study.

Before 1790 a person always remained a citizen of his native land, no matter where he lived. Since 1790 a variety of legislation has governed the naturalization process, but until the 20th century, no effort was made to keep the process uniform from place to place. The Ohio records discussed here may vary from those kept in other states.

Federal law required that aliens wishing to become citizens file a Declaration of Intention after at least a three-year's residence in the United States. This document is often referred to as "first papers." Then, after residing in the state or territory for one year prior to naturalization and a minimum of five years' residence from the date of immigration, an alien could be naturalized. Any court of record could perform this function as an agency of the federal government. In Ohio prior to 1856, the record of naturalization is usually found in the Court of Common Pleas Journal. The amount of information in the early entries depended upon the court, judge, and clerk. Often only a list of aliens and the oath of allegiance they took would be recorded in the journal, without a mention of their native county or any personal identification. Any papers giving these details may only have been "kept on file" in the court office, easily subject to loss or destruction. After 1856, the Probate Court began to take over this task, often keeping separate ledgers for Declarations of Intention and Naturalizations. These ledgers sometime record more information, depending upon their use: name of alien, age, country of origin and date of immigration can often be learned.

Minor children became citizens when their father was naturalized, although their names were not recorded on his petition. Citizenship was also extended to the family if the alien died after filing a Declaration of Intention, but before he could obtain citizenship. Aliens who resided in the United States for at least three years prior to their twenty-first birthday and two years after could be naturalized without having to file a Declaration of Intention first. Likewise, honorably discharged veterans were not required to file "first papers," if they showed proof of service. All these "proofs" were attested to in the entry in the court record, but were not attached to the naturalization itself. The Minors' and Soldiers' Records may give the name, age, country of origin and date of immigration.

Women took the citizenship of their husbands. Thus, foreign-born women became citizens when they married American men or when their husbands were naturalized, but no paperwork was filed. In 1868 Blacks became citizens under the 14th Amendment. Until 1922, American-born women lost their citizenship by marrying foreign-born men. Soon after women won the right to vote, however, they were responsible for filing their own citizenship papers regardless of their marital status. In 1940 the American Indian was granted full citizenship privileges.

Immigration patterns changed toward the end of the nineteenth century, with more immigrants arriving from the eastern and southern Europe and from non-European countries. Along with a demand for closer monitoring of this new population came a desire of uniformity in the naturalization process. A greatly revised law taking effect in 1906 sought to address both issues. Once again, the Common Pleas Court handled the process, taking over from the Probate Courts. Gradually, by the 1930's, the U.S. District Courts assumed the function. Records for aliens entering the country after June, 1906 now included a Certificate of Arrival which listed the port of entry, name of immigrant, date of arrival, and name of ship or rail line. Additional questionnaires included the alien's address, date and place of birth, occupation, port of embarkation, destination in the United States, and family information. The family information included the spouse's name, date and place of birth and marriage, and vital information on each child. The new declaration of intention now included a physical description of the alien and vital information about his spouse. The Petition of Citizenship (combined on a single form with the Certificate of Naturalization) also listed the name, date and place of birth of alien, his spouse, and each child. Name changes could be documented on this form as well. Witnesses were listed by name, occupation, and address. With some modifications, this is the form in use today.

Naturalizations could be a complex and intimidating process for the prospective citizen. Names and spellings were frequently Americanized or garbled by busy clerks. National borders changed. Immigrants moved between the time they filed their "first papers" and their final naturalization. Servicemen filed at the base where they were stationed, rather than their private residence. Some aliens waited many years before becoming citizens, and others were never naturalized. Originally, only "free white persons" could be naturalized. A law passed in 1943 allowed Chinese people to be naturalized. Persons from India and the Philippines became eligible for U.S. citizenship in 1946. The Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952 removed all racial bars to naturalization in the United States.

Even though information on early entries may provide no link to the old country or to the rest of the family, it is an important landmark in family history, and helps other researchers understand the social make-up of the communities.

Immigrants living in any American territory could become naturalized. Therefore, an examination of territorial papers is strongly encouraged. For those naturalized after September 27, 1906, the researcher should write to: Immigration and Naturalization Services, 425 I Street N.W., Washington, D.C. 20536. Other naturalizations may be found in the National Archives. Many of the late 19th Century and the 20th Century naturalizations from the U.S. District Courts in Ohio are kept at the National Archives Branch in Chicago.

FOREWORD

This compilation of Huron County declaration and naturalization records consists of two major parts. The first part is an alphabetized list of those who appeared before the Huron County Common Pleas Court, its Supreme Court, and its District Court for the purpose of declaring their intent or taking an oath to become citizens of the United States. The records excerpted range from Common Pleas Journals dated 23 October, 1819 to November, 1864. In a few instances the date of arrival in the United States and/or the date of arrival in Ohio are available. Other data of origin as town, province, or country may have been entered. Such information is presented in footnotes for the small percentage of the individuals for whom it is available. The names of the places of origin have been updated. Falsburg (Pfalzburg) as written in the original transcription has been modernized to Phalsbourg as currently spelled in "The Times - Atlas of the World", published by the Times Ltd., London, England in 1981.

The above Court's records overlap the Probate Court records for the period of 1859-1862. The Probate Court records will be abstracted in a second volume. This volume contains all the declarations and oaths recorded in the original court journals. Some names or placenames are known to be misspelled, especially for the German states. The exact transcription was hampered by the archaic handwriting of the clerks.

The second part of this volume consists of information excerpted from extant original documents of naturalization for the period of 1857-1862. These documents are not microfilmed, but are stored in the Huron County Historical Library, Norwalk, Ohio. The notation, Naturalization*, in the first part signifies that additional information is available for that person in the second part.

The Common Pleas records have been microfilmed and copies may be obtained from the Clerk of Courts Office, Huron County, 2 East Main Street, Norwalk, OH 44857. Copies of the cited original documents are available from the Huron County Chapter of the Ohio Genealogical Society, P.O. Box 923, Norwalk, OH 44857.
